REVIEW AND PROFILE
Riverman presents
TRUMAN'S WATER

Truman's Water are four slacker twenty-somethings from San Diego, California who play frantic, off-beat music with obscure Fall style lyrics...they also have a crazy drummer who jumps around and talks to the audience as much as he plays. Sounds familiar? Well leave those Pavement comparisons right here because Truman's Water are truly unique.

A fusion of jazz rhythms and punk riffs (with the odd Sonic Youth reference) most of their songs clock in at about two minutes, fast and disjointed but with a structure. Although their music can be confusing at times you soon see that every melody fits and all the hap-hazard bass lines are actually carefully crafted. This pretty much describes all of the 21 songs on their recent (double) album, "Spasm smash XXXOXOX OX and ass", (released on Elemental records). Try listening to "Sun go out" or "Rations" from it for proof.

Although Truman's Water are new to the percentage of British indie fans (they were featured in MM's 'Advance' column earlier this year), "Spasm smash..." is their second LP, the first being "Of thick thum", released a year or so ago. Apart from the albums you could also check out their single, "Our scars like badges", which is pretty widely available. Truman's Water records should be taken home and played a day until they're so scratched you need a new copy. Cherish these tarnished pop songs as originality in a sea of indie sludge rock. The vocals are a strained American drawl, the guitars could be described as experimental, and both of these traits are reminiscent of early Pavement EP's. Because the two bands are comparable Truman's Water have suffered, as by coming to the presses attention later than Pavement they can be seen only as imitators, not originators. Don't believe it, kids. Both bands have graduated from the Mark E Smith school of lyrics ("Strap a combine to yer hex pry the quicksand out of bed the thing sprawls") but if it sounds good then to hell with indie snobbery which says nothing is of worth unless its new. Truman's Water have as much in common with well-known boundary breakers Mercury Rev as with anyone... they both push the three minute pop song as far as it will go.

If the World held no frame and no rank
Men's hearts would all be as at the beginning
If the World had no wheels and no hoops
Men would all keep to their native soil.

On a bright day next week
Just before the bomb falls
Just before the world ends,
Just before I die

All my tears will powder
Black in dust like ashes
Black like Buddha's belly
Black and hot and dry

I Kill children.
I love to see them die
I Kill children
And make their mamas cry
Crush 'em under my car
I wanna hear them scream
Feed 'em poison candy
To spoil their Halloween
So you're in the kids ward
You're in there cos you're ill
How about some Pavlov
So I can see you c hill
Time to hit the school bus
I think I'll shoot the tires
Offer them a helping hand
Op open telephone wires
Ever wanted to die?
Of course you have
But I wait till I get my revenge

I don't wanna see people any more Things I never ever saw before Make me see them for the shit they are Take as many as I can away with me
Anyone can be king for a day
So I Kill children

I love to see them die

I Kill children

To make their mamas cry

I Kill children

I bang their heads indoors

I Kill children

It's too hard!

Me and My mate Harpavan went on this demo outside Parliament for old peoples rights generally but mainly about the disgusting fact ~~out~~ that V.A.T has been put on heating and as we all know that means loads of old people just won't put there heating on and die from Hypothermia. But when we got there you needed a ticket to join in properly. So we hanged out and about for a bit and each got a badge saying SPLAT THE V.A.T a good time all round. Yes really.

THE POWER IS YOURS

Just Can't Get Enough

For all you sad people who hadn't heard of them before (joke) I may as well review their gig at the Camden Underworld in May. The band appeared looking like any member of the audience or crew, and only when they strapped on their guitars did we realise this quartet of casual college drop outs were the band. But when they stormed in with a searing version of "Disindependence" the crowd realised these suburban kids were gonna give them one of the best gigs they'll see this year. The expectant atmosphere after the support band was replaced by a frenzy of noise on the stage and an exited and rewarded crowd of punters. They played some songs off the new LP, but a lot of the songs (such as "Long arm of the fireman") weren't, and for those of us who hadn't heard the first album this was a perfect introduction to frenetic songs like "Hey fish".

A lot of Kirk and Glen's (don't hold it against them) guitar solo's were improvised, but within a structure far less chaotic than it sounded. When Ely (another great one) left the drum kit mid song to wander around it seemed appropriate that such a non-conformist band ("what? Have a chorus in a song?!!") should have a kinda wacky drummer. Truman's Water played a blinding set, and left with a few more fans than they started with. What was so refreshing about their performance was the lack of pomp and circumstance, even when the drummer pranced around it was all improvised, there was no pre-meditation. The intimacy of a venue like the Underworld made the 'Truman's Water experience' all the more intense. (If you missed them last time, don't get cheated again, watch the gig guides for news of a tour). (Private message alert!! I'm sorry, Daniel.)

Truman's water - you'd have to be some kind of fool not to check them out. I don't like the term cool....but sometimes you just gotta use it. Buy the T-shirt now, kids! Make them pop stars! For extra information contact:

For ages we wanted my head shaved and some of my friends who have had theirs done were saying I should so finally I did - first of all grade

4 and now grade 5, but it's getting any shorter don't worry. Anyhow I love it and feel great about it but I have 3 things on my back.

① My mum who doesn't like it ~~but~~ and has a very annoying attitude about it and

② Because I'm white and sometimes wear my clothes (always have it doesn't go with the hair) I have got some dirty looks and ③ To start off I've never have been feminine? never wearing make up or giving much shit about my appearance and now with shaved hair too people have been giving → some subtle tips on how to be more girl like, but as I said I love my haircut.

AGGAGOBUTSO?

This sweet all girl punk band
are very fun to see play.

The 3 of them: Esme, Layla and Flossy did about 5 or 6 songs
all with a theme of nothing and got even the old men at the back tapping their feet.

My favourite was

HEY MICKY (you know the one - very 70s) which in my opinion should be changed to HEY VICKY but that's another story folks.

As they are a small underground band having only done a few gigs before and being only 15 they got a bit shy and sometimes forgot the words but hey...

The whole thing would have been really cosmic if it weren't for Barry Manilow on my right and a pool ball lad on my left. ↗

It was a nice pub
too. God I'm
